Domains, and Methods:

This work provides a theoretical and methodological exploration of longitudinal studies on child development. Covering everything from experimental design and data analysis to recent examples of longitudinal research findings. This work is a major forum for rethinking issues and strategies for future research. The book is divided into five sections covering theoretical perspectives, domains of longitudinal research, sources of data, experimental design and data analysis, and cutting-edge research findings. * * Discusses longitudinal studies of children's health, cognitive development, and psychological well-being* Provides investigation of persons and instruments used in longitudinal research* Explores experimental designs and data analysis of longitudinal research studies
